

Island County Commissioner Jill Johnson – District 2

Jill Johnson grew up on Whidbey Island, is a graduate of Central Washington University and holds a degree in Communications with a minor in Economics. She is extensively involved in the local community, having volunteered on multiple school bonds and levies including the new Wildcat Memorial Stadium and the recently renovated Oak Harbor High School.

In 2006 Jill was recognized as the 'Best Community Volunteer' and received an award from the Oak Harbor Education Foundation for her outstanding contribution to the local youth, schools and community that same year. In 2010 she was awarded the Admiral Jim Symonds 'Friend of the Navy' Award and was recognized by the American Planning Association in the Implementation Category for her involvement with the 2009 City of Oak Harbor's Windjammer program.

This is Commissioner Johnson's first foray into elective office. She and her husband, Alexander Pfeiffer, reside in Oak Harbor.
